Main Street

From fresh-baked Scottish pastries and handmade kilts to one-of-a-kind folk art and country crafts, the shops along Maxville's Main Street are a joy to explore. And when you're done, relax with an invigorating cup of tea, a frosty glass of ale, or a home-style meal.

Sports Hall of Fame

The Glenarry Sports Hall of Fame was built in 1991 to celebrate honour Glenarry's athletes. Exhibits include portraits of local sport heroes and sport memorabilia from the past. Open Victoria Day to Labour Day, from 12 pm to 5 pm, Tuesdays through Sundays. Closed Mondays, except holidays..

Heritage Grandstand

One of the few of its type still standing, this massive, all-wood grandstand was built by the Kenyon Agricultural Society at the turn of the last century. It has been home to the Maxville Fair for over 100 years and the Glenarry Highland Games for over 50.

Architectural Gems

Maxville's quiet, tree-shaded streets are dotted with historic buildings just waiting for you to discover them. And one of the best ways to explore the village's architectural heritage is to take a leisurely walking tour. ## And last, but not least... The Glenarry Highland Games

Founded in 1948, the Games attracts over 60 pipe bands and 200 highland dancers, and is ranked among Ontario's top 50 festivals. Every year on the August Civic Holiday weekend, over 25,000 visitors come to Maxville for this two-day Scottish celebration. Don't miss it!

Maxville... the “soul” of Glengarry County!

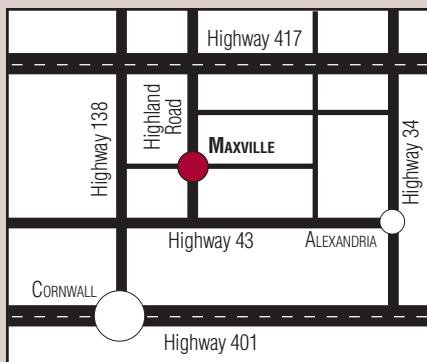

Maxville’s roots stretch back to 1869, the year Duncan MacDougall constructed a sawmill on the site of the future village. Within a few years, the mill was joined by Peter McEwen’s general store and Hugh McEwan’s blacksmith shop.

Named “Macksville” after the numerous Macs living in the area, the village flourished as a commercial hub for the young farming community. In 1882, the village received an added boost when it was chosen as a stop on the new railway line between Montreal and Ottawa. Ten years later, the village was incorporated and continued to grow until 1900, when its population numbered 749 people.

To this day, the village remains as an important cultural centre and a delightful place for growing families, retirees, and visitors alike.
